This PhD course aims to acquaint the PhD students with the process of theorizing and theory building in management research.

We start from the premise that it is critical for PhD students to master the process of theorizing and theory development from the extant knowledge and empirical data quite early in their Doctoral studies.

By the end of the course the PhD students will have gained skills and knowledge in (a) gaining sensitivity to theoretical development during the literature review process, and (b) analyzing and theorizing from qualitative data.

The students will have the opportunity to meet three distinguished scholars who are invited as guest lecturers: Prof Emeritus Nikhilesh Dholakia of University of Rhode Island, Prof Michael Saren of University of Leicester and Dr. Andy Lowe of Grounded Theory Institute. The course faculty also includes Associate Professor Michael Fast and Prof Romeo V. Turcan of Aalborg University.

This PhD course attracts PhD students in their eighteen to twenty-four months of the doctoral programme on the basis of the common issue they face, i.e., how to theorize and build theory in management research. To start the application process, please go to application section on the course website.

Participation fee is 275 EUR. The fee will cover costs related to lunches, coffee breaks, two dinners, and course material. Each participant is responsible for his/her own travel and accommodation.

The PhD Course is a programme run jointly by Aalborg University (AAU, Denmark), Halmstad University (HH, Sweden), and University of Oulu (OULU, Finland).
